Independent Regulatory Agencies Compliance with the Independent federal agencies are subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act, as amended (RFA) (see table for a list of independent agencies with abbreviations). Because they fall outside of presidential authority, however, independent agencies are not subject to executive orders concerning regulatory impact analysis or to OMB review of analysis.

The independence of regulatory authorities Fabrizio Gilardi independence of regulatory authorities tends to be much more similar in Norway, France, and the UK than in Austria, Italy, and Portugal, which points to a greater coherence of the institutional structures of regulators in the former than in the latter group of countries.

Independent Regulatory Agency Center for Effective

Independent regulatory agencies are federal agencies created by an act of Congress that are independent of the executive departments. Though they are considered part of the executive branch, these agencies are meant to impose and enforce regulations free of political influence. The Consumer Product Safety Commission, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, the Federal Communications Commission and the Securities and Exchange Commission are examples of such agencies.
